Contagious Marketing Designs Becomes International Trade Council Member

On August 13, 2014, Contagious Marketing Designs, along with owner and web developer, Julie Hunt, was inducted into the International Trade Council. This will help the company develop more in-depth connections and a more widely sustainable trade network both domestically and internationally.

Contagious Marketing Designs also has the ability to connect with local and federal lawmakers to help bring more awareness to the benefits of marketing companies everywhere. This is a very proud moment for those at Contagious Marketing Designs, especially for owner Julie Hunt, due to the fact that the networking possibilities this membership will bring can help create more benefits to their chosen industry. They will have access to new vendors, other businesses that Contagious Marketing Designs could partner with, new consumers who could benefit from their skills, and discounts on all of the items necessary to make their work stand out from the rest.

Contagious Marketing Designs strives to continually "provide the tools to communicate your company's message, engage and educate customers, and drive sales on your website" in an attempt to bring your business to the forefront of your community. They offer marketing and branding of local businesses through means such as video creation, standard and HD website design, personalized graphic design, and commercial productions. This can showcase a business, display the business's advertising, or even make the existing website rank at a higher level through SEO and organizational efforts. Contagious Marketing Designs plans to use the new industry network to help spread their community approach by accessing the assistance and reach that the International Trade Council can offer.

About Contagious Marketing Designs:

Since its inception in 2006, this Akron based company has been helping those in and around the community bring their businesses to the world wide web, showcasing what Ohio has to offer. Julie Hunt, the owner and web developer behind Contagious Marketing Designs, is dedicated to superior customer service and project management. Hunt has also been honored with being appointed to the Business Advisory Council of Ohio, and was made the honorary chairman during her tenure.
